ANTENTE POWERS CLOSE TO BULGARIAN BORDER IN EUROPEAN TURKEY AND HOLDING RAILWAY.

LONDON SEES SUCCESS

English Military Critics Figure Move One of Important Strategy.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Oct. 18.—The entente allies have effected a landing at Enos, on the Aegean sea, in European Turkey, close to the Bulgarian border, and have seized the railroad at that point, according to a dispatch from Athens to the Messagero of Rome, transmitted by the Central News agency.

Report Retreat.

Berlin, Oct. 18.—The Serbian forces in the Macva district of the Save-Drina front, in northwestern Serbia, where strong resistance has been offered to the Teutonic invaders, are now beginning to retreat, it was officially announced today.

English Report.

London, Oct. 18.—Serbian and Anglo-French troops have occupied the Bulgarian town of Skopje, thirty miles north of Saloniki, according to official telegrams from Athens. This follows closely upon the news that the Serbians with allied assistance have repulsed the attack at Vlandovo, turning the advance of the Bulgars into a retreat beyond their own border. Thus the Anglo-French action in the Balkans has leaped out of the field of surmise into a vivid foreground of fact, and it is asserted by London military observers to have been crowned at the outset with success.

Dramatic Scenes.

This arrival of French troops at the psychological moment when the Serbian struggle with 40,000 newly arrived Bulgarians at Vlandovo and Hundovo still hung in the balance, has dramatic qualities which for the moment completely eclipsed the military exploits in other theatres. The chief military importance of the allied Serbian success is the defense of the Balkan project of cutting the Saloniki-Nish railroad, which is known to have been the Bulgarian objective.

It is not clear whether British troops co-operated with the French in this operation, but a message from Athens stating they had left Saloniki Saturday night, in the direction of the Bulgarian frontier, indicates they were engaged in the scene of fighting. Russian and Italian help thus far has been only indirectly asserted by increased aggressiveness in the Adriatic, which has been made further reflection of the Balkan impasse.

Mere Demonstration.

In the eastern theatre the Germans again are attacking on both sides in the Champagne region, the French war of reports slight progress. A strong barricade to southeast of Neuville has been captured and the Givenchy wood positions have been isolated.

Answers Message.

Berlin, Oct. 18.—Emperor William in sending a reply in greeting addressed to him by the Moravian Brothers in Austria at Horowitz, says: "I hope that God's help will be the wounds inflicted upon German missions by the world's war will be healed after a glorious peace."

Repulse of Germans.

Paris, Oct. 18.—French forces repulsed completely last night three German attacks, according to the announcement given out this afternoon by the French high command. These took place at Bois-en-Hache, to the north-east of Soissons.

WILSON WILL OPEN DEFENSE CAMPAIGN IN NEW YORK CITY

President to Speak on National Navy Defense Program on Evening of November Third.

Washington, Oct. 18.—President Wilson will open his campaign for his national defense program in a speech before the Manhattan club in New York on the evening of November 3.

This will be the president's first public utterance on the subject since he approved the plans prepared by Secretary Garrison and Secretary Daniels and the speech is expected to be of significance because the president is expected to disclose the reasons he will urge upon congress why the United States should be more adequately prepared for defense.

Today the president received a letter from the Maryland peace delegation to take steps to assure the United States against attack from Germany. The letter was signed by Governor Goldsborough, Senator John Walker, Secretary of the Maryland Peace Association, Representatives Coady, Lindholm and Talbot and many business men, bankers, lawyers, judges and others.

It was declared in the letter that the people of Maryland believed the president should use his influence to place the United States in a position to protect itself and citizens from acts of aggression or oppression by any foreign power.

NEW JERSEY WOMEN CONFIDENT ON EVE OF SUFFRAGE FIGHT

Believe Voters Will Adopt Franchise Amendment by Substantial Margin at Polls Tomorrow.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Newark, N. J., Oct. 18.—The first great eastern fight for women suffrage is today only twenty-four hours away. At six o'clock tomorrow morning the polls throughout New Jersey will be opened to determine at a special election whether women shall be given the right to vote.

Two weeks from tomorrow the three other eastern states of New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts likewise will decide whether they will join their sister western sister states in giving women the ballot. President Wilson's declaration for suffrage, re-inforced by a thorough and vigorous campaign waged by organization and the expected by suffrage leaders to carry the day for women suffrage in his home state of New Jersey. Their victory is sure and by a comfortable margin, they stand confident.

On the other hand, those opposed to suffrage, are inclined to laugh at these claims and assert that the proposed constitutional amendment to enfranchise women will be buried under an avalanche of votes.

More than three hundred and fifty women speakers and other workers have been on the battlefield today, their automobiles carrying them through the sections, where fight will be the hottest, even to smaller towns and hamlets.

Women watchers and workers to number of five thousand and advised to the polls at forthcoming election for the first time in the state, received their final instruction today and prepared to take their places tomorrow at virtually every one of the polling precincts in the state.

NEW MASONIC TEMPLE IS DEDICATED TODAY

Two Million Dollar Building Dedicated at Washington With Elaborate Ceremonies.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Oct. 18.—The new two million dollar Masonic Temple, headquarters of the Supreme Council of the United States, dedicated today with elaborate ceremonies in the presence of a large assemblage of distinguished persons from many parts of the world.

The stately structure, fashioned after the famous mausoleum erected for the Mamluks by Queen Artemisia at Halicarnassus, is a masterpiece of the art of the ancient world—its unique among the many magnificent buildings in the National capital.

It has been under construction since 1911 when ground was broken by the architect, John Russell Pope, on a site on Sixteenth street about one mile from the White House on the Capital's west side, and in a section of the city where the most famous buildings of the nation have been erected during their public service in Washington.

Viewed from the exterior, on a platform above symbolic flights of steps, the structure presents a plain base, above which rises a lofty pyramidal entablature supported by thirty-three massive columns.

By four flights of steps, the temple is reached. Two massive sphinxes, symbolic of Divine Wisdom and Power, are at the entrance. On the pilasters of these figures are inscriptions in Phoenician and in Egyptian hieroglyphics. The walls of the great door, leading into the pavement, are two flaming swords, and between them the inscription, "The Temple of the Supreme Council of the Third Degree of the United States, Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry for the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States. Erected to God and Dedicated to the Service of Humanity. Salvator mundi." The frieze over the great door is "Freemasonry Builds Its Temples in the Hearts of Men and Among the Nations." A plaque on the great door bears the words, "The temple is dedicated to the service of humanity and the frieze over the great door is 'Freemasonry Builds Its Temples in the Hearts of Men and Among the Nations.'"

A large hall, reached on either side by four massive fluted columns, paved with green granite, is reached. A doorway on the left leads to the apartments of the Sovereign Grand Commander, and on the right to those of the Secretary General. Both apartments are paneled from floor to ceiling with Russian walnut. In the center of the Atrium is a great marble table and on either side between the pillars four marble seats. The walls behind the pillars are plaques bearing symbolic designs.

Directly opposite the great door is the grand staircase, guarded on either side by a statue of a woman, named Nephthys. Doors to the right and left of the staircase lead to the library and to the Supreme Council Executive chamber. The staircase, on the back of the ellipse, two other flights, curving to the right and to the left, lead to the door of the Temple. In front of which is the marble stair of the Grand Tier, inscribed "Know Thyself."

EXPECT NO ACTION ON GERMAN PROTEST

Officials Point Out That New Charge Not Different From Other Violation Complaints.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Oct. 18.—The state department does not contemplate any action on the affidavit filed by German embassy charging that marines and sailors of the British patrol boat "Barnham" killed the commander of a German submarine.

Officials pointed out today that the case did not differ from many others filed by belligerent governments, charging violation of international law and atrocities. The American government has merely filed all such protests. Officials foresee, however, that if such incidents become a general practice, they might possibly affect the submarine controversy between the United States and Germany.

They fear that if British ships generally attack German submarines, interfering with their operations, they will visit and search, the submarines might resume practice of torpedoes without warning.

The attack of the American flag by British patrol boats is regarded as a use in keeping with naval practice of previous wars and used by the United States as well as other nations. The only requirement is that a war vessel must show its true colors before opening fire.

BABCOCK FAVORED FOR STATE HONOR

May Be Named as Wisconsin's Most Distinguished Citizen to Be Honored at Exposition.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 18.—The announcement of a committee of citizens to name the most distinguished citizen of this state to be honored at the Panama-Pacific exposition has brought to the fore here a sentiment favoring the naming of Dr. S. M. Babcock, the university inventor of the Babcock milk tester, who has the invention free to the people of the state.

The committee named by Governor Philipp to make the selection has held no meeting and it is not known which plan it will follow. In Pennsylvania the newspapers of the state conducted a voting contest for the committee and the person receiving the largest number of bona fide votes was selected.

The committee which will make the choice is headed by Dr. E. G. Uppike of this city as chairman. Friends of Dr. Babcock point to the fact that he was honored by the Wisconsin legislature in 1899 and by several foreign governments for his invention. Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, formerly national chemist, suggested his name at one time for the Nobel prize.

A number of other names have been suggested. This list includes the name of a citizen of the state of Wisconsin, who was honored by the Wisconsin legislature in 1899 and by several foreign governments for his invention. Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, formerly national chemist, suggested his name at one time for the Nobel prize.

STATEMENT ISSUED ON INSURANCE RATE UNDER STATE LAWS

Circular Letter Issued by Industrial Commission on Compensation Insurance Laws.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 18.—A circular letter now being sent out by the Wisconsin Industrial commission probably will create surprise in several manufacturing plants. Possibly, also, it will give birth in some quarters to something resembling astonishment due to unexpected revelations. The letter first of all corrects the erroneous impression that the industrial commission fixes rates on workmen's compensation insurance policies.

"Many employers" says the letter, "have been informed that the industrial commission fixes insurance rates under the compensation act. Others have been told that their own rates would be reduced if the commission would permit. These and similar misstatements are sometimes made by insurance agents, doubtless through misunderstanding. It is to correct such erroneous impressions that this circular is issued."

"Insurance under the workmen's compensation act is the only form of insurance protection required by law. Having made employers' obligations, the state should see to it that insurance is obtainable on fair and reasonable terms. The legislature has sought to obtain these results by fair and open competition. The anti-discrimination law does not fix insurance rates. It does not authorize the industrial commission to fix rates. Every insurance company is free to file such rates and classifications as it sees fit. But the rates and classifications must not be discriminatory in themselves, and they must be adjusted to the varying conditions of the business. This is intended to put competition between insurance companies upon a fair basis. Fair and open competition will ultimately mean equal rates."

"There have been many actual illustrations of discrimination. A manufacturer of horse blankets (rate $1.40) was classified as a clothing manufacturer (rate $1.20). A clothing manufacturer (rate $1.20) was classified as a carpenter shop (rate $1.74). An arate and enamel-ware factory (rate $6.30) was classified as an enamel factory (rate $1.50). These classifications are clearly unfair. They amount to special favors to particular employers. All are prohibited by the anti-discrimination law."

"Competition under this law has reduced compensation insurance rates over 50 per cent since 1911. The rates, if applied to all employers now under the act, would save the additional tax of $2,800,000 per annum. Rates on the whole are now near the true level for stock companies. The commission's statistics are gradually showing the actual basis of one industry after another, and the commission's ruling, where necessary, will bring the rates into line therewith."

A few companies are now offering insurance at less than the true cost. Insurance in such companies is unsafe. The employer is liable for the payment of compensation benefits, standing his insurance. If the insurance company fails, the judgment stands against the employer. And no insurance company can long continue at a business of underwriting which it pays the compensation cost and overhead expenses. The result of over-competition in this direction can only be demoralization of the insurance industry and heavy losses to the companies which survive and a final advance in rates to recoup these losses."

NEW SMOKELESS AND DIRTLESS ENGINES ON NORTHWESTERN?

Burns Powdered Coal.—Experiments Show Great Fuel Savings.—May be Generally Adopted.

The Chicago & Northwestern railroad has come to the front with a new smokeless and dirtless engine which it is expected will be in operation on all their lines within the course of another month.

According to local officials, the use of the new engine on the local division will probably necessitate the installation of a coal crusher here.

The engine is similar to a great extent to the present locomotives. In the place of burning coal in large pieces it gets its fuel from powdered coal which is forced into the fire box through pipes leading from a small hopper on the rear of the tender. This motor, when started, makes a strong air pressure which carries the fine pieces of fuel through the pipes into the box where it is burned much the same as oil.

From experiments so far made it has been found that the engine can be operated at a much cheaper rate than the present locomotive. There are no greases and dirtless engine amount of percentage of heat for the greater part of coal used can be obtained than through the old way.

The arduous task of shoveling coal into the fire box of the engine, a present engine is done away with. It is believed by railroad men that the new engine will revolutionize railroading.

SIGHT HANDICAP TO TOMASZYNA CARLYLE

Former Student at Blind Institute Who Recovered Sight, Has Difficulties.

Frem Berley, California, comes an interesting story relative to the difficulties that confront Tomaszyzna Carlyle, a former student at the state institute for the blind, who has recovered her sight. The dispatch says that Tomaszyzna Carlyle, the University of California student, who for the first time in her life saw light and the objects of the visible world last summer, has been forced to leave the university at least temporarily, because of the difficulties she has experienced through her newly acquired sense.

The blind Miss Carlyle was the marvel of the campus because of the ease with which she took lecture notes and got about unharmed, but since the operation by which she gained the use of her eyes she has found great difficulty in adjusting herself to the new world in which she has found herself.

Miss Carlyle has been forced to learn to read and write both printing and handwriting as well as to write herself in "seeing" language. The task has been extremely heavy when coupled with the necessities of carrying on the usual college curriculum. Miss Carlyle was to have received her degree from the university next spring, but will abandon it.

Cunningham's advice to post office patrons relating to the insuring of all parcel post packages has been well headed and according to figures compiled during the first fifteen days of October, in comparison with those of last year, the parcel post insurance of the local bureau shows an increase of one hundred and twenty-five per cent. During this time a total of 5,983 packages weighing 10,454.75 pounds and bearing $390.62 postage were handled. Seven thousand three hundred and thirty-nine incoming packages were handled. JENKIN LLOYD JONES TELLS WHY HE LOVES FRANCE IN A SERMON

Former Janesville Pastor Explains His Views in His Chicago Pulpit on Sunday.

Jenkin Lloyd Jones, former Janesville pastor, at his church, All Souls, Abraham Lincoln Center, Chicago, preached yesterday on "Why Love France?" This was the third in his series on international peace. He said:

"I love France because, of all the great European powers, it has grown into a democracy that promises to be lasting. It is by no accident that it stands on the map of Europe as a republic, a country with a kind of I love France because it has made an immeasurable contribution to the republic of letters, which is always antagonistic to kings and never lurks behind a crown. The French revolution has not been wanting in its devotion to the past. I love France because the bloody revolution, with all its fantastic horrors, was born out of a devotion to principle, a love of ideals; because the flames were kindled by poets, not by tyrants. It awakened Europe and America to a fresh reading of the principles of democracy. It quickened the mind of Goethe; it hastened the coming of Tolstoy and Ruskin. Though France be scarred at present with trenches, filled with soldiers, that seem to have a death-sentence, the French people are committed to peace and progress."

COOPER CALLED TO NATION'S CAPITAL

Is On Joint Committee to Decide Matters of Importance Between District of Columbia and Federal Government.

Hon. Henry Allen Cooper of Racine, congressman of the first congressional district, was in Janesville for a few hours on Friday. He has been at Racine most of the past summer and had anticipated spending considerable time renewing old acquaintances throughout his district but the rains of the past summer made this impossible, and he was only able to make a hurried visit during the past week. Mr. Cooper has been called to Washington to take part in the conference that a congressional committee will hold this week.

Mr. Cooper was honored by a joint resolution passed by congress at its last session, calling for an investigation into the fiscal arrangement between the District of Columbia and the United States. Two democratic senators and one republican senator and two democratic members of the house and one republican member of the house were appointed a committee to investigate and report. Mr. Cooper was selected as the republican house member. The matter will be threshed out before the convening of congress and that is the reason for his early departure for Washington.

MARTHA WASHINGTON WILL IS RETURNED

Held by J. Pierpont Morgan Until It Was Returned to Fairfax Court House With Ceremonies.

Fairfax Court House, Va., Oct. 18.—Martha Washington's will, which was taken from the court house here by union troops during one of the battles of Bull Run and water found its way into the collection of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, was returned to the county archives today with elaborate ceremonies. Recently the state of Virginia sued J. Pierpont Morgan in the supreme court of the United States to recover this document. Mr. Morgan suggested that it be placed in Mount Vernon. Fairfax county folks, however, claimed it as part of its court records, and today put it in its place beside the will of George Washington.

DRINKING FOUNTAIN DECLARED A MENACE

If Improperly Constructed or Improperly Used "Bubblers" Are Dangerous to Health.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., 18.—"If improperly constructed or improperly used the drinking fountain may become a great menace to the public health than the common drinking cup," this statement was issued today by Dr. C. A. Harper, state health officer, in response to many inquiries as to cleanliness and sanitation of certain drinking cups and their use by careless individuals. The statement will be incorporated in the monthly health bulletin to be sent to all of the health officers of the state.

"A close observation of bubbling fountains located in public places has convinced the writer that the principal reason for using the fountain instead of the cup is to prevent the interchange of the secretions of the mouth and salivary glands."

"It is not an uncommon sight to see a man chewing tobacco put his lips around the spout of the metal ball and an occasional small boy will attempt to swallow the ball. These cretations and other matter left upon the metal when the mouth comes in contact with the ball are more or less difficult of removal and require more force than is contained in the gently falling current of water."

"In using the bubbling fountain the rule should be not to allow the lips to touch any part of the fountain and under no condition should the mouth be used for rinsing the mouth, or expectorating. Every person using the bubbling fountain should bear in mind that the object of the sanitary device is to prevent the interchange of mouth secretions. When mucous and other matter becomes attached to the fountain it is necessary to use great deal of force to remove it, and this is not always accomplished by a slow moving current of water."

KICKING PLAYS BIG PART IN SATURDAY'S GAMES ON GRIDIRON

Harvard Downs Virginia by Mahan's Booting—Kicks Tie Up Illinois and Ohio and Win for Iowa.

(By Striker.)

Saturday's football results give promise of a tight conference race in the west for eleven teams that were "doped" to be easy pickings for the leading teams turned and kicked over the board, which all goes to show that the favored teams have got to improve by a large percent for next week when the most important games occur.

The holding of Illinois by Ohio State to a three to three tie was the season of the day. Illinois with the state of their championship eleven last year, were picked to go through the season to another "Big Nine" title. Ohio State was never given a chance to finish better than fifth or sixth. But Saturday Coach Zuppke's eleven was unable to capture the Ohio line and were lucky to score with a goal. The absence of Fagan and Clarke, Illinois stars, weakened the offense, however, but the remainder of the team except a member, did not show expected class. Ohio State put up a stiff defense and the result of the game adds to the interest of the coming Saturday when Wisconsin and Ohio clash at Madison. By beating Purdue, 28 to 7, Wisconsin again demonstrated their prowess as a scoring machine, but it is pointed out that the Badgers could not score until late in the game when Purdue crumpled from lack of condition and training. The Purdue team played in hard luck and should be scored one or two touchdowns against Wisconsin. Byers continues to be the Wisconsin star backfield man and the Badger line was strong. Ohio State's record is now three wins and it is up to Wisconsin to eliminate her next Saturday.

Chicago defeated Indiana, but had a hard time doing it. The final score being 15 to 7. Indiana in the past has been no match for the Maroons, but Saturday uncovered football tactics that made the Hoosiers befuddled. The Hoosiers had silent signals, split defenses, triple passes for the yard to score and the Chicago men had a hard time getting away with the game. Russell is the hope of the Maroons, he being their best ground runner.

Northwestern lost, as per habit, to Iowa, 6 to 6, but in reality proved stronger than its opponent as the few eleven was unable to cross the Northwestern goal line. The victory was won by three drop-kicks, made by Dantz. The Northwestern team is much stronger than in years previous, but the jinx of defeat still follows them.

Minnesota did not uncover its real strength and still must be considered one of the three teams to be beaten for the conference title. The Gophers were handicapped by poor football conditions and but for the rocky field with their great victory would have rammed down the South Dakota team by a much larger score. Weight is going to be the Gophers' best asset.

In the east Harvard beat Virginia in their most important game by three field goals to nothing. The Crimson either did not have strength or refused to show enough power to penetrate the Virginia line and Mahan hoped the victory by three goals. As Virginia defeated Yale it is considered Harvard is far from advanced at the present state in training. Yale defeated Springfield as was expected. The surprise of the eastern games was Colorado's victory over the Army and Pennsylvania tying the Navy. The Notre Dame team plays the Army on Nov. 6 in the most important inter-sectional contests and the westerners look good to defeat the eastern team from present indications. Princeton showed great scoring power over Lafayette.

The importance of kicking was thoroughly demonstrated. Harvard won by the over-head route and Grant Houghton may have a trump card in Mahan in his booting. The system of kicking to a victory is a mighty effective one if not so spectacular. The Illinois-Ohio and the Northwestern-Iowa game also showed the importance of this department. A team with a good and sure booter is going to have a decided advantage this year. Wisconsin has been weak on

FORT DOWNS HIGHS SATURDAY 12 TO 6

Janesville Eleven Fail to Win Over Fort Atkinson High in Game Saturday Afternoon at Fair Grounds.

Saturday afternoon the Janesville high school football team met another defeat when they played the Fort Atkinson high school in a close game twelve to six. The local team outclassed the visitors during the whole game but as luck would have it, they could not win. Never in the history of the Janesville high school have they won from Fort Atkinson. The game Saturday was featured by quite a little roughness and each side was a little rougher than the other. The Janesville line played exceptionally well on both offense and defense.

The game started by Janesville receiving the ball and starting at once to rush it down the field. They were penalized twice for holding and then held for downs. Janesville forced Fort Atkinson to punt and Richards ran the ball down to the five yard line. The next play was a punt and the ball went to the Fort. Cronin missed the goal and the first quarter ended six to nothing in Janesville's favor.

The second quarter opened with Fort Atkinson on Janesville's twenty-yard line. On an end run Converse of the Fort scored their first touchdown. The Fort kicked off and the score stood a tie. The Fort kicked off and Cronin received and took the ball forty-five yards down the field. At this point of the game the referee climbed Cronin and Koster for rough playing. Captain Moore was shifted to Cronin's place and Falter took the end position. The loss of Cronin crippled the local team heavily and Lee and Richards had to work hard to make the gains. Janesville rushed the ball up to the Fort's five-yard line many times only to be penalized for being off side or held for downs. The first half ended with the ball in Janesville's possession and the score a tie.

The second half opened and Janesville kicked off to Fort Atkinson and downed them on the five yard line. The Fort worked a forward pass and secured their second touchdown. They missed the goal and the score stood six points in their favor. The last part of the game was slow and neither goal were in danger at any time. Fort Atkinson made many gains during the game by working a shift and using the forward pass. Janesville played straight football but could not have used the pass to their advantage as the Fort line was very weak. The line-up for the two teams is as follows:

Fort Atkinson, 12: Janesville, 12: Kramers, Cornish qb. Kober Allen lb. fb. Lee Converse rb. fb. Richards Krut lb. fb. Cronin Musshel lb. fb. Moore VonToerne lb. fb. Viney Lumberman lb. fb. Marshall Masters lb. fb. Taylor Toulson lb. fb. McCullough Myro lb. fb. Falter Koster lb. fb. McLay

EXPECTS TO FIGHT KILBANE FOR TITLE

Gilbert Yankee.

Gilbert Yankee, who has been sparring partner to Kilbane for the past two years, intends to follow Delaney's example. He recently quit Kilbane's camp to engage in a campaign which he expects will result in a battle with Kilbane for the title.

SPORT Snap Shots MORRIS MILLER

The managers of the fighters are having a hard time of it these days, due to the "safety first" policy the pilots of the top-line seem to have adopted. In the first place, there is the case of Harry Pollock, who is manager of Freddie Briton, lightweight champion. The Briton hasn't been turning a wheel of late, which means that he hasn't been taking in any coin, and this also means that Pollock isn't getting anything to line the pockets of his jeans.

Welsh has met pretty nearly all the talent in the lightweight ranks over the ten-round route, and some of the boys he has tackled a couple of times. As bouts between boys who have met once or twice seldom prove good attractions, the promoters have not shown any great inclination to offer them. That was one of the reasons Welsh several months ago, after a strenuous campaign, decided to take a long rest in California. A fellow might as well rest when the promoters are not dangling alluring bids in front of his eyes.

But in Welsh's case it would not be necessary for him to take his rest if he would consent to battle opponents over the derby route of twenty rounds. There have been any number of lightweight champions who have been harassing the champion for months trying to get him to sign articles for a contest of twenty rounds. There are two spots where such contests can be held and the promoters are not announcing themselves willing to put up nice purses. One of these places is Denver. The other is New Orleans.

Perhaps New Orleans would be the better place of the two, for the Crescent City always has been known as a good fight city. Tommy Burns, former heavyweight champion, and his partner, in the promotion, had ness, Dominick Tortorich, have announced themselves more than once as ready to make a deal and offer to fight any one of several lightweight contenders, among these being Charley White of Chicago and Joe Manning, the southern champion, whose home is in New Orleans, which naturally makes him a strong local favorite.

But to all of these bids Welsh and Pollock have turned a deaf ear, for they are wise to the fact that the champion's chances of success in a twenty-round bout against his younger opponents would be greatly less than in a ten-round battle. Welsh cannot be greatly blamed for the stand he has taken on the long distance proposition. He knows that with his wonderful cleverness it is next to impossible for any of the aspirants for his title to stop him, and naturally he figures that there is no good reason why he should take a chance of chinning himself when he can get a better one. He is taking the risk that surely is part of a twenty-round bout. His title is pretty safe in these no decision contests.

Baseball players, that is, those of the star order, are getting almost as bad as some of the prima donna boxers. There was a time when baseball players were not paid the salaries they were in a position to demand. The organization of the big league players are well paid for their services; in fact, some of them have been paid salaries which great many bank presidents would be glad to have.

The baseball year inaugurated by the Federal league caused a rumormongering in baseball circles that has resulted in a loss of interest in the game. The players all over the country have suffered. The players as a whole are not wise or they would not try to bring about a cut among many of the clubs. If they do this they are the ones to suffer. If they were more reasonable in their demands the club owners would be to a better position to pay their salaries and carry more men.

The result of this demand for exorbitant salaries will be a reduction later on, and also a cutting down in the number of players carried by the various teams. That is where the players of fair play will suffer the most. A few of the stars will be able to get their demands, but the small fry will have no chance. It is a pity that the players will get back at the players for what they have been forcing upon them the last two years.

7 KEYS TO BALDPATE VERY CLEVER FARCE

George M. Cohan's Farce in Two Acts Keeps Audience Guessing Throughout Entire Piece.

"Seven Keys to Baldpate" furnished two audiences at Myers Theatre Saturday with thrills, mystery and an enjoyable undercurrent of laughter. The farcical venture was a plot of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" fools the audience to the top of its bent about nine-tenths of the time required for the acting of the piece. The plot runs along after this fashion: Baldpate is a hotelier of spots, a mountain summer hotel in the dead of winter. Here comes a novelist who has just waged a battle that has turned out a story of 10,000 words in twenty-four hours (not so considerable a feat, however, as it seems—many a newspaper man has turned out that much copy in less time at a pinch). The writer, apparently, believes he has the only key to the hotel and that he will be able to work uninterruptedly to a successful conclusion of his wages. The gentleman of the second part in the wager is the owner of the inn. He commends the novelist to the kind offices of the caretaker and his wife, and arranges for a room and a room's comfort. Hardly has he begun to write when the curtain rises on another scene. A man arrives, also the possessor of a key, and deposits a roll of bills in the care of a reliable confederate to come after the money in the morning. The nervous novelist creeps feebly to the balcony above the lobby and hears all this, then trembles and comes down and demands of the stranger what he is doing in the hotel. The other man bluntly asks the same question, nipping the situation with a whiff of confusion. But the novelist woos the harsh visitor to his room and then slams the door and locks it.

No sooner is this done than the inn door is unlocked again and a young woman enters. And so until seven keys have been employed to admit more or less eccentric characters. At the end you know the visitors are actors from a not distant stock company, and there are thrills without number, the author dryly remarking from time to time that the situations are very like those in his stories. An epilogue reveals the author hurriedly finishing his story in time to win the wager.

It is, as Mr. Cohan has termed it, a mystery farce. At the end of the farce reveals the fact that the audience has been seeing the story that is running in the novelist's mind. The author dauntly tricks his audience and then finishes with a whimsical turn which gives the mystery another turn. It is all clever writing, with a bit of satire not only on the writers of "best sellers" but on audiences as well. Every line was excellently handled by the members of the cast and every character admirably portrayed.

EDGERTON HIGHS WIN FROM MONROE 20 TO 0

Edgerton High School Football Team Continues With Victories and Defeat Monroe Team.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Edgerton, Oct. 18.—Edgerton defeated Monroe by a score of 20 to 0, in a good game of football Saturday afternoon. The Edgerton team have improved wonderfully in the past week, and are playing by far the best game ever played by our high school. Monroe kicked off the ball to Edgerton and the boys made three plays without signals in such rapid succession that the Monroes were literally taken off their guard and almost substantial gains were made. This put the visitors on the defense and it was but a short time before the boys had scored their first touchdown. At the end of the first half the score stood 14 to 0 in favor of the home team. In the last half Edgerton scored but one touchdown and failed to kick goal, which made the final score 20 to 0 in favor of Edgerton. Next Saturday the boys play Fort Atkinson, at Fort Atkinson, and as many Edgerton rooters as possible should attend this game and help the boys to another victory.

BESSEY COMPANY OPENS FOR WEEK

Popular Jack Bessey Company Opens Week's Engagement at Myers Theatre Yesterday in "Help Wanted."

The opening bill by the Jack Bessey company is one of the biggest successes on the American stage. "Help Wanted," by Jack Laity, and will be remembered as having a run of thirty weeks in Chicago and played here last season at top notch prices. It contains thrills, laughs and epigrams. The troubles of a young, beautiful and sophisticated stenographer, engaged as a private secretary to a rich importer, for the theme of the big success. The author shows the ignorance of some stenographers in worldly things, her struggles, her temptations, and out of them evolves a play with many a thrill and abundance of episodes of rich, wholesome laughter.

Janesville audiences are glad to see the Bessey company here again. Mr. Bessey has always given meritorious plays. His companies have been very good. This season he states that his company and plays are far ahead of previous attempts at purveying amusement.

Miss Nell Paul, dainty and exquisite, is still the leading lady of the company and still delights her auditors. Ladies will be admitted free tonight under usual conditions.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Unsettled and slightly cooler tonight; probably showers in east portion Tuesday; partly cloudy.

WILSON'S WEDDING.

Speculation as to when President Wilson will take unto himself the bride of his choice is setting the society world agog. All the world loves a lover and, despite his age, his prominence makes President Wilson, an especial target for speculation. One of the charming features of his coming nuptials is that his daughters apparently approve of his choice. This is the best indication that he has made a wise selection and may be happy ever after. Meanwhile politics are forgotten and foreign wars take a back seat until the morning bouquet of roses has been sent from the white house to his lady love.

STILL ECONOMIZING.

Even if the last legislature did not amend the laws to such an extent that the saving in running the state government will be material and the intricate and useless commissions cut down, Governor Philipp hopes to be able to make a material showing of thrift over former administrations by cutting down the corners, saving the waste and doing away with some of the dead timber that has so long cluttered official business. A few hundreds here, a thousand or so there all count in the long run and bring the total up to a considerable amount when the final reckoning comes. Philipp is a business man, first, last and always, and if he has not played politics for the purpose of creating a political machine for his own material benefit he means the state shall benefit by his business experience if it is possible.

ONE BY ONE.

The return to the republican fold of Charles Sumner Bird, who, as the progressive candidate for governor of Massachusetts in 1913, polled 127,755 votes, is a strikingly significant of the trend of the times. Mr. Bird has not experienced a complete change of heart, it is true, but he has promised to support the republican candidate for governor, former Representative Samuel W. McCall, one of the ablest men who ever served in the Bay State in congress, and there is little doubt where Mr. Bird will be found in the presidential contest next year. Mr. Bird's position insures, of course, the election of Mr. McCall and, therefore, to Massachusetts seems to be assured the honor of being the first important state to mark the election of governor the great movement which is bringing the nation back to the guidance of the republican party.

ANOTHER COURSE NEEDED.

While the Janesville continuation school offers varied and valuable courses of instruction for its students there is great need for another line of study, which would include grammar and spelling, in simple words—plain English. It might be designated as a special course for high school and college and university graduates where they might learn some of the essentials in properly expressing their thoughts in clean English properly spelled and properly punctuated. Nor need the courses be restricted to the above mentioned graduates. It might also be made to include stenographers as a whole. However the continuation school is doing a wonderful work and giving the working boy and man and woman an opportunity to benefit themselves as they never would have had otherwise. However, this course in English might be added and should be rapidly filled with students as soon as opened.

WAR LOANS.

Dispatches from the money centers of this country have been filled with the reports of the half billion war loan which eastern capitalists are making to the allies to be spent in purchasing supplies in this country for use abroad. A stimulant for business as it were. However much the opposition may seek to block the project it is certain to go through, and the American working man will be the beneficiary. However, in this connection the Wall Street Journal has some interesting data as to the way in which the nation at war actually have financed lots of previous loans in their own countries without appealing to this side of the Atlantic at all. In this connection it says:

"It must make the British possessor of a large income shiver to hear that he is to be taxed up to 50 per cent of it. He must give up all he can of his interest for a year or two, that he may preserve his principal, which would not be worth much were the allies defeated."

"But Britain is paying as she goes, at least as far as she can. She has lent, or will have lent by the end of the year, more than $2,000,000,000 to her allies, which will be a sufficiently sound asset when the task of reducing the national debt to a peace level is undertaken. The British financing is the heaviest of all, but it is being conducted on sound lines, and it is properly prepared for any event."

"The German financing has the real advantage that it is all being done at home. Here its merit stops. The last war loan of $3,000,000,000 is a fearful and wonderful thing, and it is not surprising to hear that the German investor is beginning to realize that he has been deceived. His only real security is, in effect a bet upon victory, with the possibility of indemnity from somebody which, with the rapid impoverishment of the belligerents, is, it need hardly be said, vanishing into thin air."

"A system of note issue not secured by gold or silver but by the Reichsbank represents the first I. O. U. The subscriber to the loan presents his own mortgages or other securities constituting the second I. O. U., and with these notes issued against this security subscribes to the government loan, the third I. O. U., and with the bonds borrowed from the bank, constituting the fourth I. O. U. That the bonds of previous issues by the imperial government can be pledged in this way, only makes the matter worse.

"To call this a pyramid based upon its apex would be fulsome flattery. It is a vicious circle, all up in the air. The only tail to the kite, and a precarious one at best, is the prospect of victory. Failing that, what will be left of Germany after the war but a shell? The hibernating bear can live on his fat all winter. He cannot do so all summer."

Some one writes to ask why it is so much more apt to rain at noon and 6 p. m. when people are returning from work, than at any other time? Well, it is probably due to the same causes that in the rural districts make it shower just as the farmer is trying to get in a load of hay.

The young people will wish to give the president a good send-off on his marriage day, but the rice-throwers can feel that they have done their full duty without following him to the railroad car.

When the baseball season is over, it becomes difficult for some of our intelligent and thoughtful citizens to find anything in the newspapers worth their attention. Still, in a month or two the dope on the 1916 season will demand their careful scrutiny.

What the average magazine editor is looking for nowadays is the best looking picture of a girl for his front page cover, and the greatest number of stories about the amours of Lovey and Dovey.

SNAP SHOTS

Like Gilbert, the teller, who has four suits promised for Saturday night, devoted two hours of his time yesterday to a discussion of industrial slavery. Every man has his favorite amusement and most of them indulge in it to the detriment of business.

Eph Wiley doesn't admire Jack London. Eph says that in locating Mr. London one should look wherever display advertising is given a preferred position.

"My own theory of it," said Buck Kilby yesterday, referring to a recent wedding, "is that he was short-winded."

Men travel so much nowadays that few of them longer deem it important to carry with them a card on which the names of the lodges to which they belong are printed.

"Should an Indian marry a white girl?" queries an exchange. Having looked over the dusky beauties over, we conclude that he should if he has a chance to do so.

Eph Wiley says he has noticed that people who try to capitalize their distinguished relatives never build up much of a business.

"I'm crying," said Rosalind Bledsoe to her father the other day, "because I don't like that man." "If I," Mr. Bledsoe replied, "cried over every man I dislike water would be flowing in the gutters."

The fact that you are industrious doesn't raise you much above the common level. So is the little red ant.

"He ought to make a good reporter," said a woman yesterday who had come to seek a journalistic job for her nephew. "He always has his nose in other people's business."

The Daily Novelette

Ain't it Wonderful?
A woman is a paradox.
You play her just as you form.
For instance, it's the one who's fair,
That takes the men by storm.

Slam! Bang! Zipp!
With a flail N-hook to the jaw,
Little Pugy McBiff, who knew a little shorthand, laid low Terrible Tiddles, the six foot champion of the ward.

Then, drawing himself up to his full 5 feet 5, Pugy swaggered home.

"You lazy loafer, go down the cellar and bring me up a couple of coal!" yelled his tiny (four feet nine) wife.

"Yes'm," answered Pugy meekly as he failed to dodge the rolling pin that she had hurled at him.

While Pugy was down after the coal, a weeny baby of a mouse sashayed across the floor and Mrs. McBiff jumped up on the dresser and yelled blue murder.

Ain't it wonderful?

Do It Now.

(By Euphemie Mudge, our poetess of passion.)

Do your Christmas shopping early,
Do it early, mother dear;
So escape the hurly-burly
You've run into every year.
Do your Christmas shopping early,
You should not procrastinate,
Or you'll mingle with the surly
Crowds that do their shopping late.

Get the present for the cousins,
For the aunts and uncles, too,
Other relatives by dozens
Look for pleasant gifts from you.
If you've got dough, you must spend it,
Don't postpone the festive day.
Get the ordeal over—End it.
Have the junk all packed away.
Then when others hurry, scurry,
You can rest in peace serene.
You can murmur, "I should worry,"
And enjoy the jumbled scene.

Uncle Abner.
Deacon Stubbs asked Hod Peters what Hod thought of the Mexican imbroglio and Hod said he didn't know. He had never tasted it. Elmer Spink of our village expects to save a lot of money by leaving town for parts unknown about a week before Christmas.

Nothing succeeds like success, unless a fellow kin clean up about eighty per cent by buying a failure. Spectacles don't denote intellectuality no more than an automobile denotes great riches or perfumeery or a cold plunge every morning.

The heathen Chinese ain't nobody's fool. T. Egbert Peavey ordered seven high falutin' dishes in a Chink restaurant and they all was potatoes. The biggest bore I know of is the Leap Year is Coming.

Do not accept a young woman if she comes to your house with a whiskey breath or if she hangs around saloons a great deal. Of course she may get over it in time, but it doesn't pay to take chances of that sort.

If she has a fondness for poker, refuse her on the spot the very minute she proposes. A poker fiend wife is the worst sort, for she never has a cent to bring home to her husband on Saturday night.

That Simplified Spelling.

One of the Michigan editors says: "What an easy thing this fonetic spel-in! is! U kin spel just as you sound, and yeks such letterz to represent the sounds as u think fit. Professor Meeder (he spells it Meader, which is the saym thing) told the state teachers' convention that on conservativ estimates simplefide spelling would save millyunz (Meeder stuck to the old fashyund millions) in his manuscript of delibe beides enay-bling school pupils to devot to the ackwieshun (he speld it 'acquisition') of yewful nolliz too yers ov them waysted on learning to spel. Thar wuz a lot of Meeder's simplefide spel in his payper, as the newspapers gavy it, that wuz as hard as the old way, but uv coarse yew hav as much rite to simplify to soot yerself as Meeder has. WOMAN'S PAGE

Married Life on $80 a Month

By Mrs. E. A. LONARD

Although her head ached and she was dizzy and weak because of the nervous strain she had been under, Molly Suiter took great pains to have a good dinner on the table when her husband came home. His heart smote him when he saw her great circles under her eyes, and when she saw the simple but carefully prepared meal on the table.

"You are trying, maybe I have not done her justice," he reflected. "You should not have worked to get up a dinner when you are sick, but she has been passing her time in the kitchen, and her hand trembled as she took the bowl."

"You had to get your own breakfast; I wanted you to have something good for dinner," she replied, trying to smile.

"I've been thinking that you get out so little and so few people. It would do you good to have a little company," he said after a silence.

"It costs money to entertain; we cannot afford it," she replied. "I shall be all right, but I am not used to it," she added, as he did not reply.

"Entertaining," he resumed. "But we might have Julia Osgood over in the evening some time. You would like her."

The demon of discord must have suggested the name of the girl that had caused Molly such fierce suffering the night before. She had fought all night the temptation to make a scene, to tell him she had seen him going about with this girl, laughing and talking, while she supposed to be at home alone listening to the rain for company. At the mention of her name all the fierce jealousy and anger swept from her the last vestige of self-restraint. The cup she held in her hand fell to the floor with a crash, and her eyes blazed as she said: "Indeed! Why did you not tell me her last night when you had her out?"

So sudden was the explosion that her husband fairly jumped. He stared a moment in silence, then said: "I do not understand what you mean."

"Oh, don't you?" Her tone was full of withering scorn. "You need not try to dodge. You were seen last night going about with her. You left her alone to take her around and show her a good time."

John's first impulse was to tell her the truth, that they had been working at the office and he had gone home with her, as it was dark and late, but a sense of resentment that he had been spied on and suspected tossed the good impulse aside and he flew with a desire to make her suffer as much as possible.

"So you have turned spy, have you? Much comfort may it be to you. Do you really think you will gain anything by such tactics? Do you suppose a man will deliberately choose to stay with a woman who insults him, disturbs him, and keeps him in hot water all the time when he can find a more agreeable company?" John rose from the table and pushed back his chair.

Molly turned deadly pale when she saw him. She had done with her impulsive speech.

"I did not spy intentionally; I accidentally saw you!" she began.

"Accidentally saw me!" It was raining all evening and black as ink. I suppose you were out for a stroll," he snorted contemptuously, and, seizing his hat, strode out of the house. Little Jack, frightened at the discordant voices, began to cry. Molly gathered him up in her arms and sat down to rock him, holding him so close in her arms that he cried out with discomfort.

"Mother can't even make you comfortable," she whispered with a sob. (To be continued.)

Household Hints

CABBAGE IS WHAT YOU MAKE OF IT

Cabbage and Beet Relish—One head of cabbage chopped fine, one-half dozen beets cooked, cooled and chopped, one red pepper chopped, salt and pepper to taste. Mix all and pack in crock and cover with cold vinegar.

Sauerkraut—Cook two pounds sauerkraut one-half hour, then grind one and one-half pounds pork shoulder, add one small cup rice, one egg, salt and a dash of pepper, mix well, then with a tablespoonful of oil, into small balls. Then put in a kettle a layer of the cooked sauerkraut and a layer of meat balls, then sauerkraut and another layer of meat balls and so on until all are used. Be sure and have a layer of sauerkraut on top, then cook until done.

Cabbage for Weak Stomach—Let a half head cabbage, cut fine, come to a boil with a pinch of soda in it. Pour that water over cover with boiling water again, cook until tender, drain again; then dress with a cup of milk, one tablespoonful of flour, one tablespoonful butter, salt and pepper, serve.

Filled Cabbage Head—Large head of cabbage, boil one-half hour, then take and put cabbage head on platter spread out the leaves or after another way they are grown, all except the heart of the cabbage. Then take pork sausage, about one pound, one cup of rice, one of two eggs, nutmeg, nutmeg, mix in sausage and spread in between leaves and cover leaf after leaf until all. Fold in rest of leaves and tie it up with string and finish boiling until done. It takes about two or three hours. When done remove from fire and put on platter, melt some butter, brown and pour over top. You can cook potatoes in same water. Very good German dish.

TO WASH SHAWLS.

To wash knitted or crocheted shawls, fold them as flat as possible and lay carefully on a pillow case, run through at intervals with basting thread to keep flat. Then they should be handled like other flannel or woolen goods. If washed separately, they serve the usual precautions for woolen goods, gently squeezing through the hands and keeping the suds and rinsing water of the same lukewarm temperature. Take out on pillow case, but do not hang knitted goods up to dry. Put in the oven on a big platter, shaking and turning occasionally, or lay on a clean cloth in the sunshine.

FOR CHILDREN'S PARTY.

A pretty centerpiece for the children's table at a birthday party is made by filling a toy wheelbarrow with flowers, in which may be concealed small gifts. Fasten each gift to a flower with a ribbon streamer. The flowers are pulled at a given signal and the toy wheelbarrow or wrap wheels and handles with ribbon. Small wheelbarrows made of cardboard and painted to look like a wheelbarrow should be filled with small candles. If squabs are reasonable in price serve one to each child in a wheelbarrow made of toasted bread with a slice of lemon for a wheel.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

A snap clothespin has untold possibilities. If kept near the kitchen stove, it may be used to lift hot kettles, pull saucepans from fire, and will assist, without burning fingers, in turning pies or cakes in the oven.

To Clean Drain in Sink—If kitchen sink is clogged, don't send for a plumber until you try this: Take dishrag and douse it up and down over the drain, it will create a suction and will open the drain. To keep it open, pour the coffee grounds in, being rough, or in small particles, they will carry the grease out with them; and it is grease that clogs the pipe.

PIES DON'T RUN OVER.

Berry pies positively will not run over if the upper crust is measured and cut so that it comes just to the edge of the tin, but not over. This leaves a small space for the juice to bubble and the pie looks just as good when baked. Put a little flour and sugar on lower crust and over berries same as usual.

Bran Muffins—One cup of wheat bran, one and one-half cups graham flour, one-third teaspoon salt, three tablespoons molasses into which has been stirred a half teaspoon baking soda dissolved in one-fourth cup boiling water, one tablespoon melted butter, one cup milk (sweet or sour). Bake thoroughly in twelve portions. Steamed Indian Bread—Two cups Indian meal, one cup flour, half cup baking molasses, one pint sour milk, two scant teaspoons soda, pinch of salt. Mix thoroughly and put in two quart pudding dish well greased; steam two hours. Very delicious.

Selfishness and Giving.

In my evening paper the other day I read that a certain well-known life prisoner, who has recently died in prison, asked in his last letter to his wife, when he knew that he was nearing death, that his body be cremated and his ashes scattered to the four winds of Heaven.

Can't you just feel in that request his rebellion against the walls that have suffocated him for so long and his passionate desire that, in death, at least, he shall not be imprisoned, but be as free as air? It seems to me I can, but evidently his wife cannot, for the item went on to say that she does not approve of cremation, and was considering where to bury him.

She Gives Cut Glass Because

"I always give cut glass for a wedding present," a friend of mine says, naively, "because I can never get enough of it." Strangely enough there are people who can. You don't think she's like a book better than flowers? I heard one woman ask another in regard to a gift they were sending to a sick friend. "She has so many flowers, and I know she reads a great deal, let's send her flowers." "I do so love to get flowers when I'm ill."

A very clever woman who honors me by being my letter friend, has had her troubles with the type, for she writes me the following experience.

A Birthday Card But No Desk Handles.

"Some time ago I wrote a hardware firm in the East for a particular kind of handle for a desk. The man told me the price, and said they would mail handles. I sent them a check and for many weeks the desk went without handles. I could get no reply from the firm, and was in despair. I wrote to a friend to ask if she could not try to find out what the trouble was, and told her the inconvenience. I was suffering. She replied that she had not been within a couple of miles of the store, and did not often go in that direction. A few days later she sent me a birthday card with a charming sentiment. She prides herself on sending appropriate cards, and spends hours looking for them. I can assure you I was not particularly grateful. I was so provoked at having her spend the time in her way of doing a nice thing, rather than in the practical way I really wanted. Again I wrote to a city friend and ask how the skirts are being made this season, as I have engaged a dressmaker for next week and am uncertain. She replied by describing the opera she has attended recently. Another, who knows I love recipes for new dishes, tells me of the dinners she has given to the friends she has had with her, and the trouble she has had with her cook, but she does not think of describing the food—and so it goes! I know that probably I do the same thing myself, but when we are going to give, whether it's a letter or a material gift or a service, why can't we think what will really please the recipient, instead of what pleases us?"

Why, indeed?

Family Portraits.

There is a beautiful home on Long Island that the owners wished to lease for the summer. Two parvenus with social ambition thought this residence might be the means of launching them into local society, so they went to look it over. Upon entering the boudoir of a young woman member of the family, their eyes fell upon a beautiful Madonna on the wall. They also observed a Beatrice. One of the party said, "Well, if we do take the house, will you please remove the family portraits?"—Judge.

Of Egyptian Origin.

The Basques are a curious race, and for a century scientists believed it impossible to discover their affiliations, and with good reason, for they tried in vain to connect them with other European people. In recent times a careful and intimate study of the language has revealed them to have come from Egypt at a time so remote that even tradition and legend show no traces of that far off migration.

YOUNG WOMAN URGES. Y. W. C. A. FOR CITY

Believes Working Girls Should Have Equal Advantages With Janesville Young Men.

Urging the cause of a Y. W. C. A. or a similar institution for Janesville, so that the young women might have the same advantages for recreation, self-improvement and social life as the young men, a girl who signs herself as "A Willing Y. W. Worker" writes to the Gazette presenting her views of the matter. The letter follows:

"As one of the working girls of this city I have come to realize the need of a Y. W. C. A. for the young women of Janesville, especially since I recall the value of such an institution to me when I lived for nearly two years in one of the large cities of the northwest.

"I am happy to know that we have such a fine Y. W. C. A. and wish to congratulate all who have taken interest in the moral welfare of our young men. But how about our young women? Are they not just as valuable citizens and crave enjoyment and a 'homey' place to spend the long, lonely evenings as the boys?"

"There are many who are young people who have no relatives near, but for some good reason or other need this place for employment. Anyone who has passed through the experience of being in a city where you may know but a few people will now realize how many a sad and lonely evening these young people of our city are spending. I have had the experience and can sympathize heartily with them."

"Now if we but had a Y. W. C. A. where these girls could go and get acquainted with desirable and respectable people, how much happier their lives would be. They would meet only the refined and congenial people who in time would make valuable friends.

"We have many a good business man who has given freely to all other good things for the moral welfare of our city and I feel confident that there is not one person in this city who will not do all he can to support us in some way in this 'Willing Workers' campaign. I want to make an earnest plea to each and every one to help us in some way or other to make Janesville a city with a different name and a place that will be in the future thought of as a very desirable city in which the moral welfare is thought of first. 'Moral welfare, then prosperity to all' is my motto."

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of fourteen.

(1) Do you think I am too young to write to a boy of my own age who lives in another city?

(2) Is once a week too often?

(3) As I was attending a neighborhood dance I was told to dance—that it would do no harm. Do you think there was any harm? What should I have done?

(4) Is once a week too often to go out? I live in the country.

(5) I have become popular. Many boys ask to take me somewhere, and ask to come to see me. Should I accept some?

(6) What would be nice to serve at a Halloween party?

HAPPY THOUGHT.

(1) No.

(2) Once in three weeks is enough.

(3) One should obey that inner law, his conscience, at such times. If something within you warned you to do so, but if you did it with a perfectly clear conscience, it was all right.

(4) If you mean with boys, yes.

(5) No. You are too young.

(6) Sweet cider, doughnuts and apples.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two chums fourteen and sixteen years old.

(1) Are we too young to go auto riding with boys chaperoned by an older couple?

(2) Are we old enough to go to football games in the afternoon with two high school boys?

TWO CHUMS.

(1) It is all right if your parents approve of the chaperons.

(2) Yes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been going with a young man for some time and I was led to believe that he loved me. About two weeks ago he failed to call me up and I cannot understand why he should act so queerly. Do you think he has ceased to love me? If so, how could I possibly regain his affections? I love him so that I don't know what I will do if he doesn't come back to me. Any advice will certainly be gladly received.

ANXIOUS MARRIAGE.

You can only wait for developments. If he is ill or is silent for some such cause, you will hear from him later. If he has tired of his silence, he will think that you are different to him and this will renew his interest in you. At all odds it will be safest to remain silent and wait.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) After meeting a man should he say that he is glad to meet you, or is it the girl's place to say it?

(2) In meeting a young man should you shake hands or not? And what should you say to him?

THANK YOU.

(1) It is the man's place. The girl says, "Thank you."

(2) It is a little more cordial to shake hands than to merely speak. You should repeat his name.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a young man of twenty and I have a lady friend who lives away from here. I am going to see her and she is coming to the train to meet me. I am going to stay for three or four days, and she insists that I stay at her house instead of at the hotel. Would it be all right for me to do it?

(2) One night we are going to a big banquet at her church. At what side of her must I sit, and what may be expected of me at such a place? I have never been to a banquet.

(3) On Sunday there is to be a Christian Endeavor convention meeting and she asks me to be her guest there also. What may be expected in such a place as this?

(4) Could it be proper for me to ask her to go buggy riding Sunday afternoon?

SWEET TOOTH.

(1) Yes.

(2) It doesn't matter which side. Usually people take their places at the table so that the man sits at the girl's right. A church banquet will probably be a church supper dressed up in a new game. Act natural and you will get along all right.

(3) To sit and listen to speeches.

(4) Yes.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

The Chauffeur Who Often Took Cold.
A certain chauffeur, every few months, after being exposed to severe cold weather or rain while driving the automobile, would catch a chill, followed by a high fever, which, after a day or two, would disappear.

All our elderly readers will welcome this positive evidence that, in spite of our numerous and emphatic declarations to the contrary, one can take "cold" from mere exposure. The chauffeur himself was convinced that he took "cold." He looked upon his doctor as a "weak" "cracked" when the doctor said, "No, we can't be content with any such old fogy diagnosis. The doctor, instead, busied himself trying to find what he insisted upon calling a logical, scientific explanation for the chauffeur's chills and fever, while the chauffeur just kept putting on more and more chest protectors and mufflers and throwing in more and more undenatured alcohol to keep his cylinders working.

Well, to spoil a good story, the doctor presently found something. The doctor will always turn up something if he is determined. He found that the chauffeur had a focus.

And what's a focus, for the land's sake?

A focus is a very inappropriate name for a centre from which septic poison is distributed to the blood. It should be called a depot, but some one called it a focus years ago, so we must stick to the bad name. In this case the focus was a focus of infection, a focus of septic poison.

No, he hadn't had anything the matter with his tonsils ever, he asserted. Yet that inquisitive and unconventional doctor discovered he could toss upon one very innocent looking tonsil and squeeze out pus. Enough. Hence the age old "Out came that rotten, yet silent tonsil. Moral: The chauffeur never again "took cold."

Learned: You don't have to be a chauffeur to have a focus. A blind dental abscess is just as silent and just as likely to make you "take cold" or have "rheumatism" or some other very annoying complaint.

Climate For Cured Rheumatism. Is a temperature ranging from forty degrees during the night to eighty degrees during the day hard on one with nervous exhaustion? Is the cool, damp climate of the pine woods of the north as beneficial for one with nasal catarrh as the warm dry air of the more arid regions?

Answer: (1) A more equitable temperature might be more favorable. (2) It is as beneficial if you live outdoors most of the time.

I don't have any more "colds" since I began reading Health Talks, carols Mrs. H. A. Since learning to keep the windows open and not being afraid of a little draft, I have escaped faith in all you say. So I have perfect faith in all you say. REV. H. W. ROTH GIVES SERMON ON PARABLE

ONE OF THE FOUNDERS OF THE
ENGLISH LUTHERAN CHURCH
SPEAKS HERE SUNDAY.

IS 78 YEARS OF AGE

Old in Service and Years But Is Still
Glad to Be Able to Deliver God's Message.

Sunday morning Rev. H. W. Roth of Greenville, Pennsylvania, aged 78 years, gave the sermon before a large congregation which filled St. Peter's Lutheran church. Dr. Roth is one of the founders of this creed and despite his advanced age gave an able sermon and greeted the entire congregation at the close of the services.

The sermon was taken from the parable spoken by Jesus Christ in St. Matthew, chapter 12, when Christ spoke unto them "That the Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a certain king which made marriage for his son, and he sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding: and they did not come." Dr. Roth went further in the text, explaining that again the King sent forth his servants that a wedding feast had been prepared, all things were ready and the second invitation was extended to the people. But the people made light of it and did not come.

"Christ in this parable explains that which is confronting the modern church," said Rev. Roth. "God has prepared the wedding feast for us and beckons us to come and share the glory. In the text the servants came upon a farmer and when the servant asked him to come to the feast the farmer reported he must do his work tilling the soil. The servant came upon a business man, dealing in merchandise, and the merchant went to his business. I ask you to compare this with the modern day. The church goes out and asks the business man and the farmer and all to share in the feast of his happiness. The farmer goes to his soil and the merchant to his business. Stop and consider and till, who gave the farmer his soil to till, who gave the business man merchandise in order that he might transact business? It was God, and yet they do not come to share in the feast of Him who made their life and profession possible.

"Human beings have a desire to look into things. We cannot comprehend the great mysteries of the Bible, nor can we solve questions relating to His rule. But we can study them and to obey them in anticipation of the feast that will result as it is promised to all believers. The babe in arms, the child, the son and daughter, the mother and father, all are invited to the feast of Christ as did the king invite the people in the parable. The servants went out to the highways and byways meeting good, bad and indifferent men, high and low, and invited them, yet they refused. Not only did they refuse but they slighted, yes, made fun and treated the servants spitefully. Those that were bidden, the parable shows, were not worthy. When the king heard of the treatment of his servants, he sent forth his armies and destroyed the murderers and burned up their cities.

"Today the efforts of the messengers of God often receive this treatment. Their efforts to invite people to Christianity are slighted and treated with disdain. The invitation is waiting. Happiness is gained by answering the call and the material things that so often call men away from God are produced in their hands by God. We should be prepared for answering the invitation for the parable shows that one guest came to the wedding without proper garments. The guest was unable to explain his attire and he was cast into utter darkness. Many men were called to the feast but few were chosen. You can do as you wish, for that is what human law allows, but if you seek protection of God and His glory you must be prepared. Your very soul belongs to God and was given to you by Him and should be returned without stain of sin or transgression. He pardons our sins, lays His blessed hand on us and invites us to His Kingdom, so let us be attired with the proper garments from study and faithfulness, for the guests will be there and we shall desire to be chosen. Or will we get angry, slight the invitation as did the people of the parable, and suffer a worse fate than they? It is for every human to choose."

BRIGHTER CHILDREN

Children are probably brighter today than a generation ago—but are they stronger? That's a grave question. So many pinched faces, dulled eyes and languid feelings make us wonder if they will ever grow into robust, healthy men and women.

If your children catch-colds easily, are tired when rising, lack healthy color, or find studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion for one month to enrich their blood and restore the body forces to healthy action.

Scott's Emulsion is used in private schools. It is not a "patent medicine," simply a highly concentrated oil-food, without alcohol or harmful drugs. It cannot harm; it improves blood; it benefits lungs and strengthens the system. Your druggist has it—refuse substitutes.

KEEPING VEGETABLES THROUGH A WINTER

Suggestions to Housewives Who Plan to Lay in Winter Stock and Cut Down High Cost of Living.

It is often a problem to know how to keep our winter vegetables. The outside root cellar is the best for our own use. Cabbage needs to be kept just above freezing point and in open crates. If kept in a warm cellar and packed closely they will rot. Turnips and potatoes both keep best in a place just above freezing. While pumpkin, squash, sweet potatoes need a warm, dry place, a temperature of 50 or more is good for these vegetables. It is better that they should not touch each other, according to Farm, Stock and Home. The shells of pumpkins and squash continue to harden and the harder they are the better they keep. The softer shelled squashes and pumpkins should be used first, as they will soon spoil if kept. Onions keep best spread out in layer or open crates where they may have fresh air circulation. Dry and moderately warm is the requirement of the onion for good keeping.

Celery should be lifted with a share of the root on it and with the earth still clinging to it. It may be packed in boxes with the dirt tight about it. Celery should be kept out as long as it can be kept from freezing, and the necessity of this vegetable is the best for our own use. A temperature of 45 degrees is disastrous. Thirty-five to forty degrees are allowable for the best keeping of celery. A box may be turned over to keep the tops from wilting, or wet blankets may be hung nearby. Celery thus treated begins to grow in two or three weeks, forming new stalks at the heart while the outside ones decay.

Salads, beets, carrots and beets all need storing in sand or soil, and turnips are much better flavored in the spring than they are in the winter. Spring seems the proper time to use turnips, and in many places these can be kept in the ground by being protected.

SALTS IF KIDNEYS OR BLADDER BOTHER

Harmless to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids—
Splendid for System.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

John E. Kennedy Decides on the "Mogul Tractor"

Mr. John E. Kennedy, who is not only one of Janesville's greatest promoters, but is also the owner and manager of several large farms in the vicinity of Janesville, has recently purchased a "MOGUL TRACTOR" to be put to immediate use on one of his beautiful modern farms located a few miles north of the city.

Mr. Kennedy has made a thorough investigation of the construction of different makes of tractors and the business standing of the manufacturers of each make and is thoroughly convinced that the "Mogul" is the most practically designed, stocky built, in fact superior in every detail over any he had seen. This, together with the guarantee of the International Harvester Company (the manufacturer of this wonderful tractor) and the service rendered by The Bower City Implement Company (the local dealers for this labor saving machine) accounts for Mr. Kennedy choosing a "MOGUL."

This is the ninth (8-16) "MOGUL" sold and delivered during the season in the vicinity of Janesville, which clinches two important facts.

- (1) That a Tractor is a profitable investment for any farmer.
- (2) That "THE MOGUL" is the most popular and powerful of all, for its weight and money ever offered.

As Juanita's influence grew with Bad Anse Haver, so it was growing at the school. She had to turn away pupils who had come across the mountains on wearisome journeys because as yet she had only limited room and no teachers save herself and Dawn to care for the youngest.

At the front of the hall which led into the main school building was a rack with notches for rifles and pegs for pistols. She told all who entered that she made only one stipulation, and that was that whoever crossed the threshold must leave his armament at the door.

At first some men turned away again, taking their children with them, but as time went on they grudgingly acquiesced, and at last, with a sense of great victory, she persuaded three shaggy fathers, who were coming regularly with their children, to ride back home unarmed.

Disarmament was her idea for the great solution, and when Bad Anse came over—and he came every night now—she led him with almost breathless eagerness to the rack and showed him two modern rifles and one antiquated squirrel gun.

"What's the idea?" he asked with his skeptical smile. He found it very difficult to listen always to talk about the school in which he felt no interest and to regard his vow of silence as to herself whom he dumbly worshipped.

"Look around you, Anse," she commanded. "Do you see any dirt or dust anywhere? No; we are teaching cleanliness and sanitation, but there is just one place here where the spiders are welcome to come and spin their webs unmolested. It's that rack of guns. Did you ever hear of the shrine at Lourdes?"

"I reckon not," he confessed uneasily. Of late he had become a little ashamed of the things he did not know.

"Well, this is going to be like it, Anse. It is told that when the lame and halt and blind came to Lourdes to pray they went away straight and strong and clear of vision. There hang at the shrine there numberless crutches and canes, discarded because the men who were carried there went away needing them no more. Some day your old order of crippled things here in the mountains is going to become straight and strong, and these guns will be the discarded crutches."

He looked at her, and if no response was elicited to her prophecy, at least he could not contemplate without a stirring of enthusiasm the flushed face and glowing eye with which she spoke. It was all worth while if it could bring that sparkle of delight to her countenance.

"It's right pretty, but it won't hardly work," he said. "These men will leave their guns just so long as they don't need 'em. I'm glad to see ye pleased—but I don't want to see ye disappointed."

A little before Christmas old Milt McBriar went to Lexington, and there he met a heavily bearded man in rough clothes who had arrived that morning from the West. They conferred in a cheap eating house which bears a ragged and unwholesome appearance and is kept by an exile from the mountains.

"Now tell me, Milt," suggested Luke Thixton briefly, "what air this thing ye wants me ter do. I'm done with these hyar old flat lands that they talks so much about."

But Milt McBriar's eyes had been vacantly watching the door. It was a glass door, with its lower portion painted red and bearing in black letters the name of the proprietor.

"Damn!" he exclaimed violently, but under his breath.

"What's bit'n' ye?" asked his companion, as he bolted his food.

"We've got ter talk that over at some length. Ye're a-goin' back ter git Anse Haver, but ye hain't a-goin' just yet."

One morning as he sat over his breakfast at the kitchen table, Anse's cousin, Breck Haver, rode up in hot

Now in many childish hearts large dreams were brewing. Eager anticipations awaited the marvels. The honored young fir tree which was to bear a fruitage of gifts and lights had been singled out and marked to the ax. Anse Haver and Juanita had explored the woods together, bent on its selection. Perhaps Juanita and Dawn were as much excited as the children, but to Anse it meant more than to anyone else. She was to accompany Juanita to Lexington to buy gifts and decorations and would have her first wondrous glimpse of the lights and crowds of a city.

Milt was there at college and would be returning about the same time, so the mountain girl secretly wrote him of her coming. And even facing so grave a crisis, Anse Haver thought of that tree and hoped that Luke would not come back before Christmas.

That night, while he was sitting with Juanita and the fire was flashing on her cheeks, he said moodily: "I'm afraid ye'll have to start despising me all over again."

She looked up in astonishment. "Why?" she asked.

"I've got to kill a man."

She rose from her chair, her face pallid.

"Kill a man?" she echoed.

"God knows I hate to do it." He rose, too, and stood before the hearth. "But I reckon it had better be me than Jeb."

"Do you mean—" she broke off and finished brokenly, "that Fletch's murderer is back?"

"He's comin'. He's comin' to kill somebody else. Most likely me. It's a question of settlin' scores with a murderer that kilt Fletch for a ticket West and a hundred dollars—or lettin' young Jeb McNash go crazy an' start in the feud all over again. I reckon ye sees that I ain't no choice."

She came nearer and stood confronting him so close that he felt her breath on his face. She broke out in a low, tense voice: "Suppose he kills you?"

"He'll have his chance," said Anse Haver shortly. "I ain't 'lowin' to shoot him down from ambush."

The girl leaned forward and clutched his hands in both her own. Under the tight pressure of her fingers he felt every nerve in his body tingle and leap into a hot ecstasy of emotion, while his face became white and drawn.

"Don't risk your life," she pleaded. "Your people can't spare you; I can't spare you. Not now, Anse; I need you too much."

"Your men's voice came in a hoarse whisper."

"Ye needs me?"

"Yes, yes," she swept on, and for an instant he was on the verge of withdrawing his hands and crushing her to him, but something in his face had warned her. She dropped the hands she had been holding and said in an altered tone: "It's not just me; it's bigger than that. It's my work. We've come to be such good friends that I couldn't go on without you. My work would fail."

For a while he was silent, then he said very slowly and very bitterly: "Oh, it's just your work that needs me."

"But, Anse," she argued, "my work is all that's biggest and best in me. You understand, don't you?"

For a moment his voice got away from him and he rose fiercely:

"I don't give a damn for your work!" he blazed out. "It's you I'm interested in. That's the sort of friend I am."

She looked up at his gleaming eyes, a little amazed, and he went on, quietly enough now:

"If I fails to hang Luke Thixton I'll be right now what ye prophesied for me twenty years hence—the leader of the wolf-pack that goes down an' gets trod on. I ain't never put no such strain on my influence as this is goin' to be. I've got to hold back the Haver's an' the McBriars whilst this court foolishness dawdles along. An' if I fails down Jeb is goin' to kilt Luke anyway. I'm doin' this because ye asks it; an' now I'll say good night to ye."

Juanita Holland stood looking at the door he had closed behind him, a wild sense of tumult and uneasiness in her heart.

"That's the sort of friend I am," she repeated to herself.

CHAPTER XX.

There still remained the task of winning young Jeb's assent to his plan, and Anse Haver foresaw a stubborn battle there. Jeb had been reading law that winter; reading by the light of a log fire through long and lonely evenings in a smoke-darkened cabin.

When Anse Haver called from the stile one night, the boy laid a battered Blackstone on his knee and called out: "Come in, Anse, and pull up a cheer!"

Anse had been rehearsing his arguments as he rode through the sleek-lashed hills, and he was deeply troubled. The man and the boy sat on either side of the fireplace. Penetrating gusts swept in at the broken chinking and up through the warped floor until old Beard, lying at their feet, shivered as he slept with his forepaws stretched on the hearth and the two men hitched their chairs nearer to the blaze. By the bed still stood the rifle.

"I've Got to Kill a Man!"

That had been Fletch's; the rifle upon which the boy's eyes always fell and which to him was the symbol of his duty.

As Bad Anse Haver talked of the future with all the instinctive forcefulness that he could command, the boy's set face relaxed, and into his eyes came a glint of eagerness, because he himself was to play no small part in these affairs.

Into his heart crept the first burning of ambition, the first reaching out after a career. He saw a future opening before him, and his grave eyes were drinking in pictures in the live embers.

Then, when ambition had been kindled, the older man broached the topic which was the crux of his plea.

"The man that can do things for the mountains must be willin' to make a heap of sacrifices, Jeb," he said.

Jeb laughed, looking about the bare room of his cabin.

"Mek sacrifices?" he repeated. "I hain't never knowed nothin' else but that. I reckon I hain't skeered of it."

"I didn't mean that way, Jeb," Anse spoke slowly, holding the boy with his eyes, and something of his meaning sank in so that the lad's lean face again hardened.

The Costly Elevator.

Elevator or vertical travel for the average multistory factory, floor to floor, is seldom over 15 feet, yet in traversing that distance, together with starting, stopping, and with the same loading and unloading time, we can travel in the same time an equivalent distance of 100 feet horizontally. One factory manager, of an inquiring turn of mind, estimated in his particular plant that the cost of elevator service, wages of operator, power, repairs and time consumed by men using the elevators, amounted to about 2 per cent of his payroll.—Engineering Magazine

Peer Becomes a Mechanic.

Lord Norbury is one of the latest amateur recruits to the ranks of war workers. Tomorrow he begins employment as a fitter in a Surrey aeroplane factory, working from six o'clock in the morning until seven o'clock at night at the regulation pay of 7d. (fourteen cents) an hour.

Lord Norbury, who will take his meals with the other workmen, and will be on the same footing in all respects, is fifty-two years old and he has chosen this way of doing his bit because he is above the age limit, but feels strongly that everyone should do what he can to help the country. He has a good knowledge of internal combustion engine. Lady Norbury, who is a cousin of Lord Howard de Walden, will begin work at a soldiers' canteen at Euston the same time that her husband commences as a fitter.—London Globe.

Dinner Stories

"Look here," said the head of the firm, addressing the new stenographer, "this letter is all wrong. Your punctuation is very bad and your spelling is worse. I can't afford to send out any such stuff to my clients."

"Well," she replied, "I'm sorry if my work don't suit you, but was you expecting to get a Mrs. Noah Webster for eight dollars a week?"

Charles Lamb came one afternoon a week from Enfield to Highgate to see Coleridge, and the dinner was always arranged so that it was well over before the return stage-coach arrived at the door. On one occasion something had interrupted the dinner, Lamb was not ready for the coach, and got into it with his mouth full. As he did so a woman came up and said: "Is there any room inside?"

"No, m-m-m-y g-g-good woman," answered Lamb, that last p-piece of p-pudding filled up every chink."

A Confederate general was once captured by Major-General Hancock. Under guard he was led up to Hancock's tent. With the instincts of a true gentleman, General Hancock stepped from his tent and extended his right hand to the Confederate prisoner. "Under these circumstances I decline to shake hands with you," Hancock, who towered about three feet above the prisoner, looked at him a moment, then quietly said: "Under any other circumstances I should not offer you my hand."

HOW SHE ENDED TEN YEARS OF SKIN-TORTURE

Oct. 28, 1914.—"I had eczema on my face for ten years. Little red pimples formed in a small spot on my chin and then spread all over my face. They itched and burned awfully. It was certainly embarrassing to me, and I would not go amongst people. I tried almost every remedy and treatment that could be used for this trouble, but nothing did me any good. I used Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, and was relieved in a day or two. In one month I was cured. This was six months ago and the trouble has never returned." (Signed) Mrs. C. C. Roberts, Wrentham, Okla.

The Resinol treatment speedily heals eczema, rashes, ringworm, and other eruptions, and clears away disfiguring pimples and blackheads, even when other treatments prove worse than useless. Doctors have prescribed Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap for eighteen years, and all druggists sell them.

New Australian Gold Field. The minister for mines of western Australia has received a report from the inspector of mines at Coolgardie notifying a new find of gold between Coolgardie and Kalgoorlie. The inspector states that the ore obtained at a shallow depth is phenomenally rich, but sufficient work has not yet been done to enable him to form a definite opinion as to the extent of the find.

Be Generous in Praise. There are occasions when speech is golden, rather than silence, and when an encouraging word would be of more value than the richest material gift. Some persons are far too much afraid of the effect of a little generous and well-timed praise. They would keep their flowers in an icehouse. Letting a little sunshine upon them at times would not be amiss.—Dr. A. Thomson.

It Paid Me to Advertise My Auction in The Gazette

That is the unanimous statement of all who have seen the wisdom of advertising their sale in the most efficient manner—through the Daily Gazette.

The advertisement goes into seventy-five hundred homes and is read at a time when the reader has plenty of time to read thoroughly and consider well.

The Gazette way is the best way and the cheapest as well.

READ WHAT MR. SWAN SAYS.

I can say that it certainly paid me to advertise my auction in the Gazette. I had a very nice auction, a big crowd. We fed three hundred and forty-two for dinner and a big crowd came after dinner. Everything brought good prices.

If I had it to do over again I would not put up many auction bills because so many people came to me and said they read about my auction in the Gazette and it is a big job to put up auction bills around the country. I got two hundred but only put up fifty. It paid me to advertise in the Gazette all right.

Very truly yours,

MATT SWAN.

WAR CONTRACTORS FROM THE STATES WORK IN EUROPE

American Agent Doing Big Business in Warring Nations Selling American Goods.

(By Associated Press.)

Paris, Oct. 18.—The American agent, drawn by the lure of war contracts and the exceptional demand for American goods in all these countries, is the most familiar figure of London, Paris and the other war capitals of Europe. He is taking the place of the American pleasure tourist, who has almost disappeared from the great hotels and the boulevards now have a goodly quota of Americans telling their stories and relating their latest experiences in dealing with officials and suppliers. They are of the audacious and adventurous type and prepared on short notice to talk in round millions on a contract for machine guns, munitions, or any kind of war material.

Two of the new type of war contractors came to meet at the Grand hotel the other day, and after usual greetings and inquiries about home, one of them asked the other:

"What is your line?"

"Canned goods."

"Canned goods?"

"Plenty. I have a big contract with the military people for a war ration."

"What kind of a war ration?"

"Well, you call it a war ration in America, but over here, since the war began, I am calling it a war ration, and it has caught on fine. We take a certain portion of meat—good first-class meat and no poor stuff—and add a portion of corn, a portion of onions, a portion of carrots, with seasoning, that you see makes a fine Irish stew, but as I say over here we call it a war ration."

"And what do you think?" he went on.

"We put up that stew in one-pound tins, and after they cut the Irish stew they're going to use the tin cans for food for the New Irish army, and that's what our goods are for. The double whammy, you could get out of them—first as a war ration and then as a food ration, and that's what closed the contract."

Serves Two Purposes.

This was told in all seriousness and was not a story of the road, so that there is every reason to believe that Irish stew made in America will soon be nourishing allied troops and afterwards serving them as a respectable export to offset liquid fire, gas, phosgene and other deadly contrivances.

The group of American traveling men had considerably enlarged while this talk was going on, and one of the new-comers said:

"I've got something that beats your Irish stew, but those people at the London War Office wouldn't touch it."

"He drew from his pocket a wad of white metal that gradually unfolded itself into the form of a perfect glove. It was made of minute links of steel, such as Indian links are made of, and the linked-plate glove fitted to the hand and was flexible to all its movements."

"Have you noticed," he explained, "that the average Indian troops in the streets of London invariably have their right hand in a sling. That is because a German trench, when he makes a German trench, grabs the Indian bayonet as they are being jerked back it cuts an ugly double-edged wound in the Indian's hand. That's why the Indian troops are in hospital with wounded hands."

"Now it was to meet just such a condition and keep the Indian on the firing line that we got up this steel-linked glove. With that on his hand an Indian can jump in a trench and grab a bayonet with no danger of a wounded hand. But somehow those War Office people wouldn't see it; they're standing in their own light, for every one of those gloves would have kept an Indian soldier at the front."

Another representative of an extensive American industry related the following experience:

"An artillery harness for six horses is being furnished to one of the belligerent governments for $255. The contract was first let as a whole to an American agent at that price. But as the agent was not in the line of business—this being only one of many war contracts—he sublet it to another contractor who made a specialty in harnesses but not in harness, so that he in turn sublet the contract to us. Now I was able to go to these government people and say to them that I would furnish this six-horse artillery harness for $215 instead of $255, and also would give them our first grade of harness instead of the third grade they are getting. Why it was just like offering a man gold sovereigns. But do you know they would not listen to me. So they were not satisfied to pay $235 and it did not appeal to them in the least to hear they could get something better for $215. That's what they call conservatism. Can you beat it?"

One of the most remarkable propositions put before the allied governments was for an aerial cruiser, supported by seven gigantic airships, carrying 350 50-pound dynamite bombs. It was to fly from the French frontier to Berlin and back or no sale. This was worked out with the utmost detail, with blueprints showing a hull something like the trim lines of a large steam yacht, and small quick-firing guns mounted on the bow and stern. Above this hull were the huge airships, in two alternate series, one above the other, so as to catch the "air billows." The specifications were equally detailed, including several high-power engines. The arrangement of the planes and the construction of a whole had the approval of an influential aeronautical society in America. But the British and French air experts were skeptical, some of them declaring that what was presented on paper could not be carried out in actual flight, notwithstanding the offer made to build the craft and send it on a trial voyage before making a contract. It was thought that recent Zeppelin raids might inspire officials to take up this novel air project as an offset, but so far they have not lent a sympathetic ear.

Yankee's Reply.

A French literary man fell in with one of the new order of American commercial men the other night, and asked him if he had seen the sights of Paris.

"Oh, no," he said, "but I find that the police have closed most of the sights."

"Oh, no," said his literary friend, "the real sights of Paris, the monuments, the great open squares, the Pantheon, Notre Dame, the Invalides, the Madeleine and the Louvre."

"Ah, yes, I have seen the Louvre thoroughly," said the French home one letter in surprise, recalling the labyrinth in vastness of the Louvre collection, "and how long did it take you?"

"Fully an hour," was the reply, which has left the Frenchman puzzled ever since.
